Unit 14, an also had some clean-up of barrels after the roof of the same truck in Salt Lake City collapsed under the weight of snow Tuesday.

"We're getting the streets back to 80 feet wide, instead of 40 feet," said Kelly Brown, a Salt Lake City water department worker helping the Guard.

Utah National Guard spokesman Col. Robert Nelson said the guard members were working 12- to 14-hour shifts.

Ross said after Leavitt declared the emergency, members of the Provo unit were on the road within three hours. "We first had to dig our heavy equipment out of the snow," he said.

He said so far the only injury to the guard members occurred on Wednesday when guardsman Tracy Turner smashed a finger trying to free a frozen tailgate on a dump truck.

Ross said members of the guard are working in three shifts around the clock in cold temperatures in trucks and heavy equipment that don't have heaters.

Among those involved from Company C are: Roger Archibald, Spanish Fork; Mark Atkinson and Doug Olsen, Lindon; Daryl Christley, Darran Haddock, Luck Jennings, Lars Larson, Matt Peers, Chris Staib, and Tracy Turner, Provo; Bryan Cole, Roy Woodall, Barney Johnson and Mitch Kalanli, Orem; Sam Cowan, Lehi; James Doty, Springville; Jerry Earley, Payson; James Hall, Pleasant Grove; Joe Nicolich, St. George; Rick Simons, Magna; and Alan Swensen, Craig, Colo.

Full-time guardsmen who have helped with administrative support include Elliot Aanerud and James Ross, Provo; Jerry Baker, Orem; and Seth Waite, Spanish Fork.
